DNA Employee Graduates from Furman Connections Program

Greenville, S.C. (April 22, 2009) – Dana Morgan, Account Manager at DNA Creative Communications (DNA), recently graduated from Furman University's Connections Women Leadership Program for women leaders in the Upstate. Morgan joined a select, diverse group of approximately 30 other women in the Upstate for six events, including an orientation and kickoff presentation, a luncheon/lecture/discussion series on issues confronting women in leadership and a graduation dinner featuring a keynote speaker.

Sponsored by Furman University, Connections is a premier leadership development program intended to connect women who possess both proven and potential leadership abilities. Each event features influential female leaders in the Upstate, including elected officials, local ministers, superintendents, and prominent business and community leaders, who share their achievements and challenges as women leaders and promote lively discussion about these issues among class members. Currently in its twelfth year, Connections provides a unique opportunity for women to network and develop their leadership potential.
